KEYNOTE MESSAGE

"Soft skills is a term often associated with a person's "EQ" (Emotional Intelligence Quotient), the cluster of personality traits, social graces, communication, language, personal habits, interpersonal skills, managing people, leadership, etc. that characterize relationships with other people. Soft skills contrast to hard skills, which are generally easily quantifiable and measurable (e.g. software knowledge, basic plumbing skills).

A person's soft skill EQ is an important part of their individual contribution to the success of an organization. Particularly those organizations dealing with customers face-to-face are generally more successful, if they train their staff to use these skills. Screening or training for personal habits or traits such as dependability and conscientiousness can yield significant return on investment for an organization. For this reason, soft skills are increasingly sought out by employers in addition to standard qualifications.

The model introduced by Daniel Goleman focuses on EI as a wide array of competencies and skills that drive leadership performance. Goleman's model outlines five main EI constructs (for more details see "What Makes a Leader" by Daniel Goleman, best of Harvard Business Review 1998):

Self-awareness – the ability to know one's emotions, strengths, weaknesses, drives, values and goals and recognize their impact on others while using gut feelings to guide decisions.

Self-regulation – involves controlling or redirecting one's disruptive emotions and impulses and adapting to changing circumstances.

Social skill - managing relationships to move people in the desired direction

Empathy - considering other people's feelings especially when making decision

Motivation - being driven to achieve for the sake of achievement.

Goleman includes a set of emotional competencies within each construct of EI. Emotional competencies are not innate talents, but rather learned capabilities that must be worked on and can be developed to achieve outstanding performance. Goleman posits that individuals are born with a general emotional intelligence that determines their potential for learning emotional competencies. Goleman's model of EI has been criticized in the research literature as mere "pop psychology"

All of us want to create Impact through what we do. We can create an Impact, I am sure, if we all have soft skills. I personally think and strongly believe the word IMPACT is an outcome of soft skills such as Integrity Mannerism Passion Attitude Communication Trust/ Teamwork."

Ramesh Iyer

Keynote Speaker.

KEYNOTE MESSAGE

Soft skills remain a topic much in dentand since it can shape an individual's personality.

While we all may possess the academic background, many of us lack soft skills, which can lead to behavioral & attitudinal problems. Hence, we face difficulties in adjustment, problem solving, communication and interpersonal relationships

The fundamental strategy underlying the topic is to associate different disciplines of functioning with soft skills. Soft skills training can bridge the gap between already learned skills and innate skills. So, it is a collaborative effort between the need to learn, and the wish to learn.

Learning new skills helps in improving performance at interpersonal relationships. What differentiates great and not so great relationships is how we think, and how we allow ourselves and others to think differently

During the last decade, the perceived importance of soft skills has increased significantly. Most people acquire soft skills beyond academic or technical knowledge. However, it is a continuing endeavor and one needs to have a strong commitment with self.
